

DELT INTRAMURALS

A very important part in your college life will be the opportunity to take part in the houses intramural program. By participating in all the intramural events from rugged touch football, which we won the all-college in class D, to bowling, which we won fraternity in class B, the Purple, White and Gold again fielded strong teams which proved to be solid representatives of Delta Tau Delta.

The intramural program here at Iowa State is run by the intramural chairman from each house under the guidance of the college's intramural director. Our intramural chairman, Bud Soult, finds out such things as the deadlines for the team entering, when our teams will play, and who is eligible, in his monthly meetings.

The house has a special award, given each year for the one who does best both in skill and overall participation known as the "Athletic Supporter of the Year." Whether you're a player or a spectator, the most important part of the intramurals is the fun and spirit of playing together as a group and rooting for all your buddies.
